Visit to Mérida.
The city of Emerita Augusta was founded by order of the Emperor Caesar Augustus in the year 25 BC to house the soldiers of the Cantabrian Wars, veterans of the V Alaudae and X Gemina Legions.
From the beginning, it was a walled city in which buildings for public entertainment were of special interest (Theatre, Amphitheatre, and Circus), in addition to the Forums, temples, baths, reservoirs, and other buildings that were included in the city, as well as buildings for housing and public squares. Since 1993, Mérida has regained its greatness as, in December of that year, it was declared a World Heritage Site by UNESCO.
Mérida is today, first and foremost, an administrative city which welcomes into its bosom the remains of a complex network of cities that have overlapped successively since the founding of the Colony of Emerita Augusta in the year 25 BC.

We had contact with the Consorcio of Merida for preparing the visit. They hired a tourist guide for us.

The Old Town of Cáceres is an urban ensemble of 9ha surrounded by a wall of 1,174m, located in the Autonomous Community of Extremadura in the southwest of the Iberian Peninsula. Cáceres has been a trade route city and a political centre of the local nobles for many centuries. Since prehistoric times, people from different cultures have gathered in Cáceres and have shaped its strong historical roots. Pre-Roman settlements occupied the original plot followed by the Roman, Arab, Jewish and Christian people.
